

Cameron Barnett is a poet and teacher in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. He is the author of The Drowning Boy's Guide to Water, winner of the Autumn House Press 2017 Rising Writer Contest and finalist for the 49th NAACP Image Awards for Outstanding Literary Work in Poetry. His second full-length collection, Murmur, is forthcoming from Autumn House Press in February 2024. Cameron is a graduate of Duquesne University, and he holds his MFA and MAT from the University of Pittsburgh. He currently is the 2022-2024 Emerging Black Writer in Residence for Chatham University's MFA program. He is the winner of the 2019 Emerging Artist Awardee for the Carol R. Brown Creative Achievement Awards. Cameron's poetry explores the complexity of race and the body for Black Americans today. He teaches middle school English language arts and social studies at his alma mater.
